Anti-Christian Movement Is Reported in Far East

AMOY, China, June 14.—The religious world of the Far East is stirred by an anti-Christian movement which started early in May among the students of private and government schools throughout the country. These young people term Christianity a superstition and harmful to the people, taking away reverence for ancestors and freedom of thought and action.

The new movement has begun an energetic propaganda, which in turn has brought Christian leaders to the front, many of whom look upon the movement with grave misgivings, not knowing what will be the outcome. Others think it is simply the result of a desire to organize something, and that the best means of defeating it is to ignore it.

Conditions provoking the organization of such a movement are said by Christian leaders to be the rapid progress of Christianity in China, taken together with much talk and advertising of the recent World's Christian Student Conference and other conferences of a like nature held in this country. The students are declared to be unconscious tools in the hands of leaders who are seeking favorable conditions for the breaking up of organized society and the working of Communistic ideas.

The leaders of this anti-Christian movement are Dr. Tsai Yanpei, Chancellor of the Peking National University; Wang Chao-min, secretary to Dr. Sun Yat-sen, and Chen Tzu-shu, who is a Socialist. Sub-organizations will no doubt spring up. A Free Love Society has already been formed among the students of Amoy University.

Considering the possibility of an anti-Christian movement resulting, the local Consular bodies have taken up the matter with the Commissioner of Foreign Affairs who, however, pronounces himself unable to give any promise of protection in case of persecution. Already in a few places minor outbreaks of a hostile nature against mission work have been reported, in spite of the claim by leaders of the movement that the purpose is to be nothing more than passive resistance.
